Singapore (6 February 2026) — Marina Bay Sands hosted its fifth annual Sands Cares Global Food Kit Build yesterday in partnership with The Food Bank Singapore, assembling 6,000 food kits for distribution to vulnerable communities in Singapore.

The event also marked the kick-off of its parent company Las Vegas Sands' 2026 Sands Cares Global Food Kit Build series held annually in Las Vegas, Macao and Singapore, reaffirming the company's commitment to addressing food security and alleviating hardship in its regions.

In the lead-up to the Chinese New Year festivities, Marina Bay Sands partnered with Metta Welfare Association to produce a series of 3D printed keychains inspired by Singapore's heritage snacks. Designed by artists with special needs, the keychains, attached on all 6,000 food kits, served as a festive touch while reflecting Sands Cares' commitment to empowering persons with disabilities through meaningful creative opportunities.

These food kits provide timely support and a touch of comfort at an important time of year. Mr. Dumont and Ms. Felicia Wee, Deputy Executive Director at Metta Welfare Association, on stage with the artists who have participated in their first ever large production of 3D printed keychains

Marina Bay Sands has supported Metta Welfare Association since 2010 through funding support for its vocational training programmes and employment opportunities for its graduates. One initiative under its Youth Employment Support is the Arts@Metta programme that equips youths with special needs with artistic and professional skills, widening career pathways through comprehensive training and development in visual arts.

Aged between 24 and 30, the artists from the Arts@Metta programme specially designed a series of keychains celebrating Singapore's heritage snacks, translating their creativity to vibrant sketches and careful detailing of ang ku kueh, curry puff, iced gem biscuits, ketupat, kueh lapis and kueh salat. Three of the artists – Donovan Ho, Crystal Tay and Christine Goh – contributed to a larger-than-life 3D printed ang ku kueh art piece, magnifying the symbolism of prosperity and longevity embedded in the traditional delicacy, which they hand-painted together with Mr. Dumont.

Ms. Felicia Wee, Deputy Executive Director at Metta Welfare Association, shared: "We are delighted to contribute to this year's Sands Cares Global Food Kit Build and are heartened to see our artists proudly showcasing their creativity and talent for a good cause. At Metta, we believe in empowering our youths with life skills that promote integration, independence and socialisation, including through the arts which has a powerful role in enriching lives, encouraging self-expression and nurturing confidence."
